Luigi joined Ughi e Nunziante in 2012 following eight years in a primary Italian firm, where he gained considerable experience in litigation, arbitration, corporate law and contract law, especially in the energy, financial and insurance sectors.

After graduating in law at the University ‘La Sapienza’ in Rome, Luigi focused on comparative and international commercial law; he obtained a master at the University of Aix-en-Provence in droit des affaires internationales and later got a PhD in comparative and uniform commercial law at the University ‘La Sapienza’ in Rome, as well as a Postgraduate Diploma in International Commercial Arbitration at Queen Mary University of London.

Following years as a teaching assistant for the comparative private law department of the University ‘La Sapienza’ and the LUISS Guido Carli University of Rome, Luigi now regularly teaches at various masters organized by such universities, and principally deals with corporate law, international private law and contract law. Luigi has published several articles on arbitration matters on important journals both in Italy and abroad.

Luigi regularly assists Italian and foreign companies before arbitration tribunals (ad hoc, ICC, Camera Arbitrale di Milano, ICSID etc.), as well as before Italian courts.

He is fluent in Italian, English and French and has a working knowledge of Spanish and Portuguese.
