What is a class action?

This panel will provide a clear and concise overview of the form of class action developed in the United States and Canada. Its centrepiece will be a lecture describing the US form of class action in terms that the European lawyers in the audience will readily understand, and covering the following main points:

- The history and purposes of class actions (access to justice, judicial economy and behaviour modification)
- How class actions commence
- Requirements for class certification (common issues, representative plaintiff, superior means of resolving dispute)
- Providing notice to the class and administering the class action
- Difficulties particular to class action litigation
- Judicial supervision to prevent abuses: withdrawal of case, settlement, remuneration of lawyers
- Opting in and opting out
- Trial on the common issue and resolution of individual issues
- Remedies
- Procedures for approval of settlement
- Effect of judgments in class actions

The lecture will be followed by two shorter presentations: one describing the nuances of the Canadian approach to class actions; the other addressing particularities of class actions in the securities context. There will be ample time available at the end of each session for questions from the audience.

How class actions really work in practice

This panel will outline some of the practical considerations that cause the class action system to function the way it does in North America and will address the following topics:

- Economic incentives, compensation and cooperation of class counsel (contingency fee agreements; American rule on award of attorneys' fees)
- Settlement of class actions: how and why they really happen and what the dynamics are
- Measuring the results of class actions (number of cases that settle as opposed to go to trial; amount of damages; amount of attorneys' fees; number of class members who submit claims; impact on corporate behaviour)
- How class notice is effected in practice
- Strategic use of class actions by defendants

Class actions and Europe

This panel will provide an introduction to the current status of class or collective actions in Europe and the principal obstacles to transferring the North American model of class action to the legal systems of Europe. Topics will include:

- Implementation of the EU Directive on Collective Consumer Actions
- Impediments to waiver of substantive and procedural rights through silence, including Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights
- Principle that a party must be able to control the prosecution or defense of his/her case (Dispositionsmaxime)

Speakers

Professor George Bermann Columbia University School of Law, New York

Professor Michele Taruffo University of Pavia, Pavia

1030 – 1100 COFFEE/TEA BREAK

1100 – 1230

European legislative developments on collective actions

This panel will explore in some depth the enacted and proposed legislation on collective actions in England, Germany, Italy and the Netherlands, and briefly touch upon such efforts in other European legal systems. Topics include:

- Description of legislation and proposals that most closely approximate the North American model of class actions
- Experience with adapting this model to the local context
- Predictions as to future developments in this area

Keynote speaker

Meglana Kuneva EU Commission, Brussels (Invited)

1400 – 1500

Mock hearing on class certification

This session will simulate a hearing before a US court on whether to certify a worldwide class action that includes large numbers of European class members. The main issue is whether a US class action judgment would be recognised by European courts or refused on public policy or other grounds. An expert on the laws of European jurisdictions will be cross-examined.

1530 – 1715

Roundtable discussion of advantages and disadvantages of class actions in Europe

This panel will serve as a springboard for a broader discussion as to what extent class action can or should be adopted in Europe, both as practical and policy matters. Topics to include:

- Cost and funding of class actions
- Defining the class: opting in versus opting out
- Can class litigation exist without contingency fees for attorneys or broad discovery of evidence?
- Impact of class litigation on companies and their policies
- Fairness and abuses of the class system
- Reconciling class litigation with the right of representation

American Bar Association

SECTION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

Who are we?

The Section of International Law (ABA International) is the gateway to international and transnational practice for the more than 400,000 members of the American Bar Association. We are the primary network for ABA members who practice internationally, and we are a leader in advocacy for international legal policy and for promotion of the rule of law.

We have 15,000 + members; 50% of whom are in private practice, 10% are in-house counsel, and nearly 20% live outside of the United States (more than 90 countries in total).

What do we do?

International Outreach

We organize the annual ABA Day at the United Nations, give advice on nominations to international courts, organize International Legal Exchange (ILEX) briefing trips (to more than 45 countries since 1982), maintain close working relationships with bars and legal associations around the world, and hold major international law programs and events in countries worldwide.

Interaction with U.S. Government

We organize an annual dinner with the General Counsel of U.S. Government Agencies, a Section Day on the Hill, and videoconferences between Government Agencies and our members. We invite many high-level U.S. and international Government Agency speakers to our meetings.

Our Committees

Our committees are the lifeblood of the Section, and we have more than 60 substantive committees which cover virtually all aspects of international and transnational law – from the basic to advanced.

Our committees have active listserves and individual websites that committee members maintain and keep up-to-date. The committees produce practice-specific publications and electronic newsletters, and host programs at our three major seasonal meetings. The committees also organize stand-alone programs and teleconferences in specialized areas of interest to their members.

Our Publications

Our members receive the Section's monthly electronic newsletter, which brings members the latest updates and important information on Section activities in an easy to click through format.

The Section also publishes a quarterly newsletter, the International Law News, which reports on developments in international law and trends of vital interest to international law practitioners, and The International Lawyer, the most widely read scholarly journal in international law, which is sent quarterly to member and non-member subscribers. The Section also publishes books of interest to its members and, in particular, the International Practitioners Deskbook Series (IPDS) of books, which are indispensable to the international practitioner.

Our Meetings and Programs

Through our seasonal meetings and stand-alone programs, we offer literally hundreds of opportunities to attend programs and hear top-level speakers address cutting edge issues in international law and practice and earn continuing legal education credit, while networking and attending social and educational events at venues such as the United Nations, the Supreme Court of the United States, the Federal Reserve Bank, the U.S. Department of State, the World Bank, the Inns of Court, and other sites of international interest and importance.

International Bar Association

the global voice of the legal profession

The International Bar Association (IBA), established in 1947, is the world's leading organisation of international legal practitioners, bar associations and law societies. The IBA influences the development of international law reform and shapes the future of the legal profession throughout the world. It has a membership of 30,000 individual lawyers and more than 195 bar associations and law societies spanning all continents. It has considerable expertise in providing assistance to the global legal community as well as being a source of distinguished legal commentators for international news outlets.

Grouped into two divisions – the Legal Practice Division and the Public and Professional Interest Division – the IBA covers all practice areas and professional interests, providing members with access to leading experts and up-to-date information. Through the various committees of the divisions, the IBA enables an interchange of information and views among its members as to laws, practices and professional responsibilities relating to the practice of business law around the globe. Additionally, the IBA's high-quality publications and world-class conferences provide unrivalled professional development and network-building opportunities for international legal practitioners and professional associates.

The IBA's Bar Issues Commission provides an invaluable forum for IBA member organisations to discuss all matters relating to law at an international level.

The IBA's Human Rights Institute works across the Association, to promote, protect and enforce human rights under a just rule of law, and to preserve the independence of the judiciary and the legal profession worldwide.

Other institutions established by the IBA include the Southern Africa Litigation Centre and the International Legal Assistance Consortium.

Litigation Committee

The Litigation Committee is part of the Dispute Resolution Section and has a membership of over 1,800. It focuses on legal, practical and procedural issues involved in conducting litigation at an international level, including issues such as jurisdiction, choice of law and the role of international judicial assistance in dispute resolution. The committee meets annually at the IBA's Annual Conference and also has a specialist litigation conference generally held in May or June each year, together with regular seminars and events organised by the committee's local country chairs.
